ANDREW PETERSON RETIRES FROM BUSINESS.

Conducted Jewelry Store on Same Lot 42 Years. Succeeded by Son Carl W. Peterson.

Forty-two years of active business career in one place is a record seldom equaled by any merchant anywhere. Andrew Peterson came to Grayling in February of 1880 and opened a watch repairing establishment on the lot upon which his place of business is situated today. Later he added a stock of jewelry and built up a jewelry and repair business that has made his place known all over northern Michigan. He carried a stock of jewelry and silverware that is seldom found in a city the size of Grayling, and by honest dealing and service built up an excellent patronage.

Mr. Peterson learned the watchmaking trade in Denmark, where he began a four-year apprenticeship at the age of 14 years, and in which occupation he has since continued. Business success has followed, and efforts and has gained for him and his estimable wife a competence that will amply care for them through their latter years of life.

Last week Mr. Peterson retired from active business when he sold his establishment to his son Carl W. Peterson. The latter was almost raised in the jewelry business and had the advantage of learning under his father and has become a connoisseur of the jeweler's art. Besides his practical training in his father's store, he worked for three years as a traveling salesman for two wholesale jewelry firms. Since a year 1909 except for the three years as a traveling salesman, Carl has had active management of his father's store and in that time has proven himself capable of owning and managing the business himself.

While the senior Peterson will retire from business, he says that it will be impossible for him to remain away from the place where he spent the best years of his life and that he intends to make the store his headquarters most of the time. Both Mr. Peterson and his successor have the best wishes of the people of this community where both are well known and respected.

CARL W. FRITSCH.

Now that the heat and passion of the primary is over, Michigan Republicans are beginning to appreciate the excellent judgment displayed by Carl B. Fritsch as executive chairman of the "Townsend for Senator Committee" in avoiding all phases of hysterical over-statement, and controversy with the other candidates and their friends. Mr. Fritsch's good sense, poise and native courtesy have been remarked many times during the re-

THE KNOCKERS ARE STILL KNOCKING, BUT THE BOOSTERS ARE STILL BOOSTING. THANKS TO THEM.

Let's all get together and be boosters.

The proposition before us at present is the job of getting the shirt factory located here. Let's have it. We need it. Most of our business men have done their share. Some have gone further. Others have not turned a hand. So also with our citizens who have property which this industry will effect. We must have every property owner behind the proposition. The sooner each one of us boost the more certain we are to have the factory established in Grayling. It's up to you—lend your assistance or we lose. We have a few days grace left.

Why not have this new industry for Grayling? It will be an inspiration for others to come. We can do it.

SCHEDULE FOR LAND CLEARING SCHOOL

LAND CLEARING TRAIN AT FREDERIC AND GRAYLING SEPT. 26-27.

East Lansing, Sept. 19. The land clearing train which left Cheboygan on Sept. 18 for its tour of the northern counties of the lower peninsula will reach Frederic and Grayling on Sept. 26 and 27, respectively.

The land clearing demonstration will be held on the Arthur Howse farm east of Frederic at 9 o'clock sharp, Tuesday and in Grayling at the R. Hanson alfalfa field south of the lumber piles, at 9:00 a. m. sharp Wednesday. The farmers of Beaver Creek, Grayling and South Branch townships are particularly urged to be at the Grayling demonstration.

The train, which is in charge of L. F. Livingston, land clearing specialist of the Michigan Agricultural College extension division, will carry complete equipment for demonstration of land clearing methods and operations. It will be practically the same train which was operated so successfully in the Upper Peninsula last spring. After traveling south over the Michigan Central to Bay City, it will be switched to the Detroit and Mackinac and headed north again.

Nearly thirty "schools" will be held during the trip, with thirteen of them scheduled for the first leg of the run. During the first four days of this week the train visited Cheboygan, Wolverine, Gaylord and Elmira. The schedule for the remainder of the trip to Bay City is announced as follows: Johannesburg, Sept. 22-23; Otsego Lake, Sept. 25; Frederic, Sept. 26; Grayling, Sept. 27; West Branch, Sept. 28; Alger, Sept. 29; Kawkawlin, Sept. 30; Gladwin, Oct. 2; Bay City, Oct. 3; Midland, Oct. 4.

The train is being run through the co-operation of the Michigan Agricultural College, which is providing the corps of land clearing experts; the two railroads, which are providing transportation; commercial companies, which are providing explosive and implements for use in the demonstration schools; and county agents, farm bureaus, and the Northeastern Michigan Development Bureau, thru its secretary T. F. Marston, which have assisted in arranging the itinerary.

Men who enroll as students in the one-day schools not only receive instruction, but are given opportunity to perform the operations themselves. The work includes various methods of stump pulling and blasting.

cent campaign and now that we review recent political history and see that Sen. Townsend has been nominated with so large a majority considering the divided field, it is apparent that noise and bluster, over-statement and recrimination are not necessary to success in a primary contest, at least in Michigan.

Michigan Republicans can go into the fall election in better form than they could possibly have done if the Senator's campaign had been carried on in the same reckless way pursued by some of the supporters of the other candidates. Each of the three other candidates for the Senatorship from the outset realized that he only had one chance in four to win. They having done their best, are all, we believe, good sportsmen, and they are in position to support Senator Townsend without feeling any unkindness because of any violent statement of either Senator Townsend or his supporters. That is a cause for congratulation on the part of Republicans everywhere as it should be of all of the people without regard to party affiliation.

If we are to continue to maintain our present form of government, we can only continue to make nominations by the primary method if the contestants who enter a race will be good sportsmen and fight clean while the fight is on and wholeheartedly support the winner.

We commend Mr. Fritsch's able, courteous, sensible and clear headed conduct of the primary campaign to all political candidates and their friends without regard to party.—Soo Times: 9-18.

LOCALS DIVIDE WITH EAST JORDAN

GUNDERSON, SOUTH PAW PITCHER HOLDS GRAYLING TO THREE HITS SUNDAY.

Two games of ball, probably ones that have been looked forward to with more interest than usual, were those played last Saturday and Sunday on the home lot between Grayling and East Jordan. Saturday's game went easily to the locals and was near to a shut out for East Jordan. Sunday the locals with count-less errors, and up against the first south paw pitcher of the season, could not connect with the apple and so had to take defeat. Fans were disappointed in these games not to see Clarence Johnson hurl as he had been advertised.

The Saturday game with "Babe" Laurent on the mound was a one-sided affair. East Jordan score being made up of goose eggs until the ninth inning, when Laurent got a little wild and with errors in the field and on bases the visitors registered 4 runs. This made the score 7 to 4. The game was a easy one for the locals. Burden of Charlevoix was the pitcher for East Jordan Saturday, with Conrad behind the bat. Johnson received for Laurent.

The score by innings was:
East Jordan 0 0 0 0 0 0 4 4 9 6
Grayling 0 0 1 0 2 3 1 0 7 11 3

Sunday it was a different story, as Grayling was up against the first southpaw pitcher of the season, and he fooled them, everyone Reynolds, B. Laurent and Doroh each succeeded however in slamming the ball for singles. It looked for a time as the Gundersons would pitch a hitless game and he had 14 strike-outs to his credit.

Noa of Gaylord started pitching for Grayling, but went out in the third inning in favor of Laurent. At this time East Jordan had three runs and registered 8 hits and had a nice lead on Grayling. Having pitched the game the day before Laurent was a little lame, but probably, with better support behind him, would have held the visitors down. East Jordan out of the nine runs had only one earned run. Laurent while playing in the field during the fore part of the game made a pretty double play, pulling down what looked like a hit in right field and throwing out Johnson who thought when the ball sailed thru the air that it would be impossible to get started for third base and on his return to second was thrown out.

Ten errors were made by the locals, the cause being probably on account of being shifted from positions they have played. Reynolds has gone back to his old place at short, Nelson played third, Salisbury center field, W. Laurent did not participate in either game having left the team, and is succeeded as captain by Salisbury. Before the first game he called all the players into the dug-out and gave them a confidential talk.

The score by innings Sunday was:
East Jordan 2 0 1 2 1 2 0 9 13 3
Grayling 0 0 0 0 1 1 0 0 2 3 10
Batteries for Grayling Noa, Laurent and Johnson. For East Jordan, Gundersen and Conrad.

FARM BUREAU NOTES

LIMESTONE LEGUMES LIVESTOCK

MEAN PROFITS IN FARMING

What the Farm Bureau Has Done For You.

Since you men organized the Michigan State Farm Bureau in 1919 and 1920 with a membership of 97,000, you have built up a great cooperative sales, purchasing, and general service organization with headquarters at Lansing. It connects with every farm bureau community in the state. Your county farm bureau, local farm bureau unit and co-operative association are always at your service.

What does the Farm Bureau do for you and what services does it offer you as a member?
You have built the greatest cooperative seed handling organization in the country. It protects you on seed as no other concern has ever done. You Farm Bureau members have sown 8,000,000 pounds of this guaranteed seed in the past two years and are using more all the time. Calculate the immediate and future returns on such an investment!

What is Yours?

You have built the Michigan Elevator Exchange, which markets grain, hay and beans for 101 local elevators. You have built a purchasing department that at last is coming into its own. Watch that department! Your wool pools have served you despite settlement delays which will never occur again, now that the bureau has full control of the pool. What would have happened without wool pools?

The Farm Bureau represents you in the state and nationally on transportation, legislative and taxation matters.

This is your organization, your opportunity to co-operate with all your neighbors for the good of ourselves, our county and our state. Where is your place in the Farm Bureau movement? On the inside with the fellows who are doing things or on the outside looking in?

Unorganized Farmer Blamed for Wastes.

It is the unorganized farmer who is at fault for the costly and wasteful speculative system now prevailing in the marketing of many agricultural commodities. Anton Sapiro, famous cooperative attorney, recently told the milk producers of the Chicago district.

Mr. Sapiro has helped to organize forty-seven co-operative farmers' marketing associations, all of which have been successful for the farmer.

"Don't blame the speculator," he said. "He is the natural result of the lack of organization in agriculture. What would you think if each one of the forty thousand stockholders in one of the large meat packing companies would begin selling meat products independently of all the other stockholders? That is exactly what is happening in unorganized agriculture today! Is it any wonder that agriculture in many cases has not been receiving the price it deserved for its products?"

"If farming is to be a successful business the farmer must organize along business lines and market his own product just as efficiently as other manufacturers."

Farmers Back Ford's Muscle Shoals Offer.

Farm Bureaus Want Immediate Acceptance; Win Victories In Congress.

Farm Bureau supported measures and a big inning in Congress early in June when Congress voted to place a farmer representative on the Federal Reserve Board to represent agricultural credit needs, and the House passed the Voigt Filled Milk bill, making illegal interstate commerce in artificial condensed milk. The Farm Bureau has come out for immediate acceptance by Congress the Henry Ford Muscle Shoals offer. The State Farm Bureau Board of Directors adopted a strong resolution at its meeting June 13, urging Michigan Congressmen to vote for the Ford proposal and to work for its acceptance at this session of Congress. A vote is expected soon.

Farm Bureau Blows Started Rate Drop.

Continuance of Farmers Cut Makes Slash General; How Bureau Did It.

The recent ten per cent cut on all freight rates except agricultural commodities will save farmers about $127,000,000 on their purchases of other products, it is estimated. The farmers' ten per cent cut was effective January 1 last for a six months trial. July 1 it was extended indefinitely. The farmer is now enjoying a ten per cent general reduction on all freight rates.

The Farm Bureau led all other interests in getting the ten per cent agricultural reduction ordered December 3, 1921 by the Interstate Commerce Commission. In March, 1921 the American Farm Bureau called a national shippers' conference where evidence was taken. During the summer of 1921 the Bureau petitioned President Harding and the I. C. C. for a reduction on live stock, grain, grain products and hay. In July and August the Federation took part in hearings before the I. C. C. The President Howard called upon the railroad executives in a railroad conference to make a voluntary ten per cent cut on basic commodities. The executives sub-committee did recommend such a cut but were over-ruled by the executives. Whereupon the Federation filed a petition with the I. C. C. demanding a ten to twenty per cent cut on basic commodities. The carriers then announced that they would be ready to make a ten per cent cut but delayed until the I. C. C. took a hand and accepted the roads at their word and ordered a ten per cent cut in rates effective January 1, 1921. It has just been extended.

Bloc Booms Campbell.

The Farm Bloc at Washington is insistent that Milo D. Campbell, Michigan farm organization man, be appointed either to the Federal Reserve Board as agriculture's representative or else to the Federal Trade Commission in the same capacity. There are vacancies on both boards. President Harding has before him a strong endorsement from the Farm Bloc regarding Mr. Campbell's fitness for either of the positions. Senators Townsend and Newberry are also urging Mr. Campbell's appointment.

What It Costs.

Your annual membership is $10. Five dollars is used in local work you see. Five dollars is sent to the State office and 50 cents of that goes to the support of the American Farm Bureau Federation, whose services are numerous and national in their scope. Spreading the remaining $4.50 of the State organization's money over 12 months you as a State Farm Bureau member received the above services, were represented and your interests protected for less than nine cents a week.

LIGHT-SIX

CLOSED CARS

Present prices are the lowest at which Studebaker Light-Six closed cars have ever been sold.

Yet the intrinsic values are emphatically the greatest Studebaker ever offered. This means they are the best values that the industry affords, because Studebaker cars have always been above par in the amount of value per dollar invested.

Capacity production and the savings resulting from Studebaker methods of complete manufacture make these low prices possible.

Light-Six closed cars are sturdily built of finest materials and best workmanship. The bodies are the product of Studebaker skill and craftsmanship, and the prices of $1550 for the Sedan and $1225 for the Coupe-Roadster are no index to their inherent value.

When you buy a car you want to look at several makes. Include Studebaker in your list and after you have ridden in the Light-Six Sedan or Coupe-Roadster it will not be difficult to make up your mind.

The foundations of Studebaker success are quality, durability, comfort and integrity—principles that have been upheld steadfastly by Studebaker for seventy years. You can depend upon Studebaker automobiles because of the name they bear.

SYNOPSIS—At Thornton Fairchild's death his son Robert learns that he has been a dark period in his father's life which for almost thirty years has caused him suffering. The secret is hinted at in a document left by the elder Fairchild, which also informs Robert he is now owner of a mining claim in Colorado, and advising him to see Henry Boardman, a lawyer. Boardman tells Robert his claim, a silver mine, is at Ohadi, thirty-eight miles from Denver. He also warns him against a certain man, "Squint" Rodaine, his father's enemy. Robert decides to go to Ohadi. On the road to Ohadi from Denver Fairchild meets a girl, apparently in a frenzy of haste, to change a tire on her auto. When she has left, the sheriff and a posse appear, in pursuit of a bandit. Fairchild, bewildered, misleads them as to the direction the girl had taken. At Ohadi Fairchild is warmly greeted by "Squint" Rodaine, a boarding-house keeper, for his father's sake. From Mother Howard Fairchild learns something of the mystery connected with the disappearance of "Squint" Rodaine. He meets the co-worker in the mine. He meets the girl he had assisted, but she denies her identity. She is Anita Richmond, Judge Richmond's daughter. Visiting his claim, Fairchild is shadowed by a man he recognizes from descriptions as "Squint" Rodaine. Back in Ohadi, his father's old friend, Harry Harkins, a Cornishman, summoned from England by Boardman to help Fairchild, tells him with joy. The pair find the mine flooded and have not sufficient funds to have it pumped dry. Later in the day "Squint" Rodaine announces that he has practically saved Harkins' life from the flooded mine, and evidently is drowned. Harkins, being a general favorite, the entire population turns out to clear the flooded mine.

CHAPTER VIII.—Continued.

Fairchild turned at the entrance of the mine and waited for the first of the miners and the accompanying gleam of his carbide. Then they went within and to the shaft, the light shining downward upon the only black water below. Two objects floated there, a broken piece of timber, torn from the side of the shaft, where someone evidently had grasped hastily at it in an effort to stop a fall, and a new, four-footed but, gradually becoming water-soaked and sinking slowly beneath the surface. And then, for the first time, fear clutched at Fairchild's heart—fear which hope could not ignore.

"There's his fat," it was a miner starting downward.

Fairchild had seen it, but he strove to put aside the thought.

"True," he answered, "but anyone could lose a hat, simply by looking over the edge of the shaft. Harry's a strong man. Certainly he would know how to swim. And in any event he should have been able to have kept afloat for at least a few minutes. Rodaine says that he heard a shout and ran right in here; but all that he could see was ruffled water and a floating hat."

Then he paused suddenly. It had come to him that Rodaine might have helped in the demise of Harry.

Shouts sounded from outside, and the roaring of a motor truck as it made its slow, tortuous way up the boulder-strewn road with its gullies and immovable cuts. Voices came, rumbling and varied. Lights, gaining the mouth of the tunnel, Fairchild could see a mass of shadows outlined by the carbides, all following the leadership of a small, excited man, Sam Herbenfelder, still seeking his diamond.

The big pump from the Argonaut tunnel was aboard the truck, which was followed by two other auto vehicles, each loaded with gasoline engines and smaller pumps. A hundred men were in the crowd, all equipped with ropes and buckets. Sam Herbenfelder's plans had been heard. The search was about to begin for the body of Harry and the diamond that circled one finger. And Fairchild hastened to do his part.

Until far into the night they worked and strained to put the big pump into position; while crews of men, four and five in a group, hauled water as fast as possible, that the aggregate might be lessened to the greatest possible extent before the pumps, with their hoses, were attached. Then the gasoline engines began to snort, great lengths of tubing were let down into the shaft, and spurring water started down the mountain side as the task of unwatering the shaft began.

But it was a slow job. Morning found the distance to the water lengthened by twenty to thirty feet, and the bucket brigades nearly at the end of their ropes. Men trudged down the hills to breakfast, sending others in their places. Fairchild stayed on to meet Mother Howard and assist her nervousness as best he could, dividing his time between her and the task before him. Noon found the water ten feet lower, the figure standing now and then tumbling down the hills, the smaller pumps were working now in unison with the larger one. Afternoon—and most of Ohadi was there. Fairchild could distinguish the form of Anita Richmond in the hundreds of women and men clustered about the opening of the tunnel, and for once she was not in the company of Maurice Rodaine. He hurried to her and she smiled at his approach.

"Have they found anything yet?"

"Nothing—so far. Except that there is plenty of water in the shaft. I'm trying not to believe it."

"I hope it isn't true." Her voice was low and serious. "Father was talking to me—about you. And we hoped you two would succeed—this time."

Evidently her father had told her more than she cared to relate. Fairchild caught the infection in her voice but disregarded it.

"I owe you an apology," he said bluntly.

"For what?"

"Last night. I couldn't resist it—I forgot for a moment that you were there. But, I—I hope that you'll believe me to be a gentleman, in spite of it."

She smiled up at him quickly.

"I already have had proof of that. I am only hoping that you will believe me—well, that you'll forget something."

"You mean—"

"Yes," she countered quickly, as though to cut off his explanation. "It seemed like a great deal. Yet it was nothing at all. I would feel much happier if I were sure you had disregarded it."

Fairchild looked at her for a long time, studying her with his serious blue eyes, wondering about many things, wishing that he knew more of her, and their ways. At last he said the thing that he felt, the night, forward outburst of a straightforward man:

"You're not going to be offended if I tell you something?"

"Certainly not."

"The sheriff came along just after you had made the turn. He was looking for an auto bandit."

"A what?" She stared at him with wide-open, almost laughing eyes. "But you don't believe—"

"He was looking for a man," said Fairchild quietly. "I—I told him that I hadn't seen anything but—a boy. I was willing to do that then—because I couldn't believe that a girl like you would—"

A moment he sought speech while she smiled up at him. Then out it came. "I—I don't care what it is—I like you. Honest, I do. I liked you so much when I was changing that tire that I didn't even notice it when you put the money in my hand. I—well, you're not the kind of a girl who would do anything really wrong. It might be a prank—or something like that—but it wouldn't be wrong. So—so there's an end to it."

Again she laughed softly, in a way tantalizing to Robert Fairchild, as though she were making game of him.

"What do you know about women?" she asked finally, and Fairchild told the truth.

"Nothing."

"Then—" the laugh grew heartier, finally, however, to die away. The girl put forth her hand. "But I won't say what I was going to. It wouldn't sound right. I hope that I—I live up to your estimation of me. At least—I'm thankful to you for being the man you are. And I won't forget."

And once more her hand had rested in his—a small, warm, caressing thing in spite of the purely casual grasp of an impersonal action. Again Robert Fairchild felt a thrill that was new to him, and he stood watching her until she had reached the motor car, which had brought her to the big curve, and had faded down the hill. Then he went back to assist the sweating workmen and the anxious-faced Sam Herbenfelder. The water was down seventy feet.

That night Robert Fairchild sought a few hours' sleep. Two days after the town still divided its attention between preparations for the Old Times dance and the progress in the dewatering of the Blue Poppy shaft. Now and then the long hose was withdrawn, and dynamite lowered on floats to the surface of the water, far below, a copper wire trailing it. A push of the plunger, a detonation, and a wall of long moments; a accomplished nothing, and the pumping went on. If the earthly remains of Harry Harkins were below, they steadfastly refused to come to the surface.

The water had fallen to the level of the drift, two hundred feet down; the pumps now were working on the main flood which still lay below.

A day more and a day after that. The water was now only a few feet high in the shaft; it meant that the whole great opening, together with the drift tunnel, soon would be dewatered to an extent sufficient to permit of exploration. Again the motor cars ground up the narrow roadway. Outside the tunnel the crowds gathered. Fairchild saw Anita Richmond and greeted his teeth at the fact that young Rodaine accompanied her. Farther in the background, narrow eyes watching closely, was Squint Rodaine. And still further—

Fairchild gasped as he noticed the figure plodding down the mountain side. He put out a hand, then, seizing the nervous Herbenfelder by the shoulder, whirled him around.

"Look," he exclaimed. "Look there! Didn't I tell you! Didn't I have a hunch?"

For, coming toward them jauntily, slowly, was a figure in beaming blue, a Fedora on his head now, but with the rest of his wardrobe intact, yellow, hamp-topped shoes and all. Someone shouted. Everybody turned. And as they did so, the figure, a Cornishman, a moment later, a booming voice sounded, the unmistakable voice of Harry Harkins:

"I say! What's the matter over there? Did somebody fall in?"

The puffing of gasoline engines ceased. A moment more and the gurgling cough of the pumps was stilled, while the shouting and laughter of a great crowd sounded through the hills. A leaping form went forward, Sam Herbenfelder, to seize Harry. To pat him and paw him, as though in assurance that he really was alive, then to grasp wildly at the ring on his finger. But Harry waved him aside.

"Ain't I paid the installment on it?" he remonstrated. "What's the rumpus?"

Fairchild, with Mother Howard, both laughing happily, was just behind Herbenfelder. And behind them was thronging half of Ohadi.

"We thought you were drowned!"

"Me?" Harry's laughter boomed again, in a way that sent these pumps.

"Me drowned, just because I let a roller and dropped my hat?" Sam Herbenfelder shook a scrawny fist under Harry's nose. The big Cornishman waved it aside as one would brush away an obnoxious fly. Then he grinned at the townspeople about him.

"Well," he confessed, "there was an un'oly lot of water in there, and I didn't 'ave any money. What else was I to do?"

"You—!" A pumpman had picked up a piece of heavy timbering and thrown it at him in mock ferocity. "Work us to death and then come back and give us the laugh! Where you been at?"

"Center City," confessed Harry cheerily.

"And you knew all the time?"

Mother Howard wagged a finger under his nose.

"Well," and the Cornishman chuckled. "I didn't 'ave any money. I 'ad to get that shaft unwatered, didn't I?"

"Get a rail!" An intruder—brought—pumpman had come forward. "Think you can pull that on us? Get a rail!"

Someone seized a small, dead pine which lay on the ground near by. Others hoped to strip it of the scraggy limbs which still clung to it. Harry watched them and chuckled—for he knew that in none was there malice. He had played his joke and won. It was their turn now. Shouting in mock anger, calling for all dire things, from lynchings on down to burnings at the stake, they dragged the dead pine to the shaft, threw it astraddle of it, then, with willing hands, volunteering on every side, hoisted the tree high above them and started down the mountain side, Sam Herbenfelder trotting in the rear and forgetting his anger in the joyful knowledge that his ring at last was safe.

Behind the throng of men with their mock threats trailed the women and children, some throwing pine cones at the booming Harry, juggling him, self on the narrow pole; and in the crowd, Fairchild found, someone he could watch with more than ordinary interest—Anita Richmond, trudging along with the rest, apparently remonstrating with the sullen, mean-looking young man at her side. In the crowd, Fairchild knew that young Rodaine was not pleased with the return of Harkins. As for the father—

Fairchild whirled at a voice by his side and looked straight into the crooked eyes of Thornton Fairchild's enemy. The blue-white scar had turned almost black now, the eyes were red from swollen, blood-stained veins, the evil, thin, crooked lips were working in sullen fury. They were practically alone at the mouth of the mine, Fairchild with a laud dying on his lips, Rodaine with all the hate and anger and futility matted that a human being can know typified in his scarred, hawk-like features. A thin, tapered hand came upward, to double, leaving one bony, curved finger extending in emphasis of the words which streamed from the slit of a mouth:

"Funny, weren't you? Played your cheap jokes and got away with 'em. But everybody ain't like them fools."

"It's only costing about a fourth of what it ought to. Drowning's worth something," he laughed again. Fairchild joined him, then sobered.

"It brought Rodaine out of the bushes," he said. "Squint threatened us after they'd hauled you down town on the rail."

Harry grinned jovially.

"Ain't it just what I expected? It's better that we than to 'ave 'im snoop 'n' around."

They chuckled together then; it was something to know that they had not only forced Squint Rodaine to show his enmity openly, but it was something more to make him the instrument of helping them with their work. Harry looked down the hole, stared intently at nothing, then turned to the rusty hoist.

"Ere's the thing we've got to fix up now. This 'ere chiv wheel's all out of gear."

"What makes your face so red?" Fairchild asked the question as the bemused visage of Harry came nearer to

Relief Is Found From Stomach Trouble

Hope for the millions of unfortunate men and women who are victims of stomach trouble is sounded by William Hoylen, of 18 Spring St., Bristol, Conn. Mr. Hoylen was a victim of stomach trouble in its worst form, but was completely restored to health by taking Tanlac. He says:

"For fifteen years I had attacks of stomach trouble, and had been in bed for three weeks when I got Tanlac, but three bottles built me up fifteen pounds, and made a well man of me. I am now eating steak and onions, and feel just fine in every way."

Undigested food ferments in the stomach and soon the entire system is filled with poisons. Tanlac was designed to restore the stomach to a healthy condition and build up the whole body. Millions everywhere have acclaimed its wonderful power. Get a bottle today.

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists.—Advertisement.

Landor the Explorer.
Henry Savage Landor has a splendid record as an explorer. He was the first known white man to reach both sources of the Brahmaputra river in India and established their exact positions in Tibet. His explorations in the Himalayas also yielded a vast store of information. He later spent a whole year cruising among and studying the Philippine Islands.

Imagination.
Tommy, age four, went with his sister, early in the spring, to pick violets in the woods near his home. One day, a few weeks later, he and his mother accompanied some friends on an automobile ride. As the car passed along a road bordered with locust trees in full bloom, Tommy said: "Mother, I see violets growing on trees."

CUTE KNITTED OUTERWEAR; FUR TRIMMED FALL COATS

NOW that the big stores and children's specialty outfitting shops carry a vast assortment of "comfy" knitted woolen togs for infants and wee tots, the problem of going "a-huntin'" to get a rabbit skin to wrap the baby in has been reduced to a minimum.

In this day and generation mother seeks the infant or junior department of her "nearest dealer," where is spread before her an array of knitted outer garments suited to every requirement of every child. Already the falling leaves hint of cool days to come and the subject of providing the children with protective outdoor garments is a timely one.

From the standpoint of appearance or of practicability there is nothing to

The question of the coat is uppermost in many a fair head, for the time has come to buy one. A feast is spread for the benefit of every woman who must make a choice this fall; but the melancholy days are come when many a coat aspires to associate with beautiful, sumptuous furs; they are higher priced and far more becoming than they would be otherwise. Women are finding them irresistible and there are several good reasons for buying as fine a garment as the purse allows.

The soft-faced cloths are rich and lustrous and they invite the use of furs in their trimmings. There seems to be an abundance of skins, but the handling of furs takes much time and this is what runs into money. Most furs compare with knitted goods for children. Consider, for instance, the little white wool infant set shown in the illustration. It is adjustable to every change of the thermometer. Consisting as it does of four pieces it may be worn in part or entirely. The snug-fitting leggings have a slip-cord at waist with tassels; the sweater coat is supplied with a protecting collar, four white buttons down the front, one at neck, pockets (the pride of childhood); cap with flap each side and white pearl button; pair of mittens.

For the child who spends most of its time outdoors the sweater is indispensable, and let it be of the sturdy sort, knit substantially, to withstand wear and tear. The happy-looking little girl in the picture is wearing just such a one. It is a scarlet sweater coat with collar and belt fastened are long-lived and serve their wearers for several years, so that they pay for themselves in the end.

Two handsome coats, as shown in the picture, are typical of the season's offerings. Both of them employ a soft, lustrous pile-fabric for the body of the garment, both of them are straight-hanging and each has a strap-afidle of self material. They have a look of warmth and luxurious softness, which appears to be the aim of every coat designer this year. The coat at the left is a lovely dove-brown color, with collar and cuffs of silky, dark brown fox fur. Long silk cords, ending in tassels, fall from ornaments of silk at the left side.

A rich and glossy black, in the coat at the right, measures up to the beauty of the black caracul fur that adorns it. It has wide cuffs and full collar of the fur and squares of it make with one red button in front, six red buttons down the front and one under collar fastened with the loop. The becoming hood is knitted in fine stitch, with two colorful stripes and white tassel on short cord matched to the stripes.

A very clever idea also is the plaided knit cape for little girls. Another article obtainable in the Junior department is a knitted tam o' shanter with its top of white wool in finger stitch.

A very handsome four-piece set is knitted in a striped stitch effect and it has a brush lining. Silk brand blinds the leggings. The brushed lining appears in the reverse of the cap, the collar and the top of the mittens.

a checkboard design that almost covers the skirt portion of the garment. Crepe de chine is a favorite material for lining coats of this kind.

Usually things are in plain colors, and there is a fad for using two or even three colors, set together with a soft, fancy braid. A light color, at the top of the garment, will never "crack" or darken a light dress, and a dark color on the lower half of the coat does not show soil which is apt to gather there.

Side Panels
Side panels, beaded or embroidered, and cut longer than the regular hemline, are a popular trimming for skirts

Organdie.
The smartest organdie frocks are made of two shades of material, often the lighter shade used over the dark. Organdie flowers are frequently used as trimming.

Sleeveless Frocks.
There is some rebellion against the frock which is altogether sleeveless. Women with ugly arms decline to emphasize them. The alternative is a pair of sleeves of the bishop type. They are made of extremely fine tulle, but while almost transparent they are saved from this by being gathered into a narrow band on the upper arm and at the wrist. The gathers prevent complete transparency, yet do not detract from the light and filmy effect which sleeves must have if they are worn at a moment when sleeves are "out" officially.

DAIRY HINTS

FEED POINTS FOR DAIRYMAN

To Obtain Maximum Milk Production Cow Must Be Attended to at Proper Moment.

If you would get a maximum milk production from your cows, feed the right feed at the right time and in the right amounts, advises M. H. Keeney, dairy specialist of the New Jersey State College of Agriculture.

Mr. Keeney gives the following practical suggestions for dairymen in feeding for milk production:

1. Feed all the roughage a cow will clean up. Part of it should be a legume such as clover or alfalfa.

2. Feed some succulent feed such as silage or roots.

3. Feed a balanced ration.

4. Feed grain in accordance to milk production. For a Holstein or Ayrshire, approximately one pound of grain for each 4 pounds of milk; for a Guernsey or Jersey, about one pound grain for each 3 pounds of milk. A variety of grains in the mixture is desirable.

5. During short pastures supplement with silage or some green feed, together with some grain.

6. Feed and milk regularly.

7. Supply an abundance of pure fresh water at all times.

8. Give access to salt daily.

9. Purchase grain feeds on the basis of their protein and energy content and not alone on just the cost per unit.

GROWING RATIONS FOR CALF

In Feeding Young Dairy Animals Material Supplied Must Be Fresh. Building—Salt Is Needed.

"There are two things to remember in feeding dairy calves," says E. A. Hanson, dairy specialist with the agricultural extension division of the University of Minnesota. "The feed must make them grow and must supply flesh-building material so they will be in good condition."

Growing feeds, he says, consist of skim milk, clover hay, oats, bran and oil meal. The fattening feeds are corn, barley and oil meal. For calves under six months old in good condition and having a soft, mellow hide a mixture of 30 pounds ground corn, 30 pounds ground oats, 30 pounds bran and 10 pounds oil meal, fed three to five pounds daily, is recommended by Mr. Hanson. A mixture of 30 pounds ground corn, 20 pounds ground barley, 40 pounds ground oats and 10 pounds oil meal, also fed at the rate of from three to five pounds a day, is advised for calves in poor condition.

"Salt improves the calf's appetite, so keep a box with clean salt in sheltered place where the calf may eat of it freely," Mr. Hanson advises. "Provide all the good clover or alfalfa hay the calf will eat up clean. Never allow the calves or yearlings to run with the herd."

NEW BETTER-SIRES EMBLEMS

Certificate of Improved Design for Recognition of Good Work in Improving Stock.

A new emblem of improved design for recognition of good work in improving live stock is ready for distribution by the bureau of animal industry of the United States Department of Agriculture. The certificate, which measures 8 1/2 by 10 1/2 inches, resembles a steel engraving and is suitable for framing.

A person holding an old emblem and desiring to exchange it for a new one may do so by returning the old one to the bureau of animal industry. About 7,800 of the old emblems have been issued to breeders and others working with the department in improving the utility value of farm animals, reducing the number of runts, and in other ways benefiting the live stock of the country.

Bull Is Most Important.
Have you a ready dairy bull? If not see your county agent about getting one or forming a co-operative bull association. The bull is the most important part of the dairy herd as he is the sire of your future herd.

Make Silo Fit Herd.
In installing a silo make it fit the size of your herd. The diameter should allow you to feed your herd at least two inches off the surface to prevent surface spoilage, then make it deep enough to last as long as you expect to feed during the year.

Silo a Necessity.
The silo has come to be recognized as a necessity on farms where ten or more dairy cattle are kept. In fact it is now recognized as the most profitable building on the dairy farm.

Reason for Increased Yield.
The reason that cows increase the flow of milk when put on pasture in the spring, is that they are getting a succulent feed.

Plan for Winter Feed.
It's time to take an inventory of livestock and determine the number to carry through the winter on the amount of roughage you will have.

Dry Hands for Milking.
Milk with dry hands, never let the hands come in contact with the milk.

AT LEAST GUILTY OF LYING

Truly Clergyman Had Refrained From Blasphemy, but He Had Sinned In Another Direction.

A clergyman who years ago settled in Massachusetts once reproved a workman for swearing while he was working a new field.

"Swear!" said the man. "I guess you'd swear!"

Whereupon the preacher took the plow and hurried after it, indignantly denying the charge. Then, as the field became more impassable, he began panting.

"I never saw the like! I never saw the like!" When he had gone once round the field he stopped, breathless, and added:

"There, you see I didn't find it necessary to swear."

"No," said the other, "but you've told more'n 50 lies. You said you never did see the like, and you saw it all the time I was plowing!"

No More Peace in the Country.
"The Sabbath day" remarked the optimist.

"Don't I know it?" growled the village grocer.

"And you do not rejoice, my brother?"

"I do not. I haven't been up more than an hour and a dozen automobile parties have already whirled through our town, raising a dust, making a racket and spreading terror among the pigs and poultry. That sort of thing will be going on all day long. Gosh ding! I wish it would rain pitch-forks!"—Birmingham Age-Herald.

A FEELING OF SECURITY

You naturally feel secure when you know that the medicine you are about to take is absolutely pure and contains no harmful or habit-producing drugs.

Such a medicine is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

The same standard of purity, strength and excellence is maintained in every bottle of Swamp-Root.

It is scientifically compounded from vegetable herbs. It is not a stimulant and is taken in teaspoonful doses. It is not recommended for everything. It is nature's great helper in relieving and overcoming kidney, liver and bladder troubles.

A sworn statement of purity is with every bottle of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root.

If you need a medicine, you should have the best. On sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to try this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

Henry Hadn't Changed.
Mr. Duverson was feeling rather pleased with himself.

"So you heard me make my speech last night, Marla?"

"Yes," answered his wife. "I was up in the gallery."

"Well, you haven't told me what you thought of it," said Henry, expecting to be highly praised.

"Oh, it reminded me so much of your courting me, Henry?"

"Really? How was that?"

"Why Henry, I thought you would never come to the point."

Self-Preservation.
"I'm sorry to see you are deaf," bawled the sympathetic gentleman in a hotel lobby.

"I'm not deaf," replied the old gentleman who had an ear trumpet in his hand.

"Then why do you carry that thing around?"

"There's a convention of uplifters going on here. Whenever one of the glad-eyed delegates corners me and starts to talking about the 'cause' I bust this horn and he backs off."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

When Commander Maury Died.
M. W. Maury (the great marine authority) died in 1873, one of the most loved and honored men in the state of Virginia.

It is recorded that, near the end he asked his son: "Am I dragging my anchors?"

And when the latter replied in the affirmative, the father gave a brave sailor's answer:

"All's well," he said.—Julian Street, in "American Adventures."

The diligent says: "Today." The sluggard says: "Tomorrow."

NERVOUS AND HALF-SICK WOMEN

These Letters Recommending Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Will Interest You

For Your Own Good Please Read Them

Youngstown, Ohio.—"Last fall I began to feel mean and my back hurt me and I could hardly do my little bit of housework. I was played out when I would just sweep one room and would have to rest. I would have to put a cushion behind me when I would sit down and at night I could not sleep unless I had something under my back. I had awful cramps every month and was just nearly all in. Finally my husband said to me one day, 'Why don't you try Lydia E. Pinkham's medicine?' and I said, 'I am willing to take anything if I could get well again.' So I took one bottle and a second one and felt better and the neighbors asked me what I was doing and said, 'Surely it must be doing you good all right.' I have just finished my eighth bottle and I cannot express to you how I feel, the way I would like to. If you can use this letter you are welcome to it and if any woman does not believe what I have written to be true, she can write to me and I will describe my condition to her as I have to you."—Mrs. ELMER HEASLEY, 141 S. Jackson St., Youngstown, Ohio.

"I was very nervous and run-down," writes Mrs. L. E. Wiese of 706 Louisa St., New Orleans, La. "I would often sit down and cry, and was always blue and had no ambition. I was this way for over a year and had allowed myself to get into quite a serious condition. One day I saw your advertisement in the daily paper and began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once. I have improved ever since taking the third bottle and find it is the best medicine I have ever taken."

Benefited by First Bottle

"I was completely run down and not able to do my housework. I just dragged myself around and did not have energy to get up when once I laid down. I read advertisements of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in our paper 'The Indiana Daily Times,' and learned all about it. I received results from the very first bottle and now I am doing all my own work, even washing and ironing, and I never felt better in my life. I tell all my friends it is due to you."—Mrs. ELIZABETH RINOLD, 403 N. Pine St., Indianapolis, Indiana.

You should pay heed to the experiences of these women. They know how they felt before taking the Vegetable Compound, and afterwards, too. Their words are true.

NOTHING WORSE IN PROSPECT

Traveler Satisfied He Had Got Over the Most Uncomfortable Part of His Journey.

W. S. Inglis, the well-known coal operator, told a railroad story at a railroad men's banquet in Scranton.

"There used to be a little line," he said, "a branch line about 12 miles long, that was notorious for its bumps, general discomfort and dirt."

"A train on this line pulled into town one morning late half an hour, as usual, and a man said as he rose and brushed himself off:

"Well, thank goodness, the worst part of my journey is over."

"Goin' far?" said another man.

"Hong Kong, China," said the first chap.

Helped Him Off.
They found him lying on the sidewalk, both eyes were black and blue and one almost closed, his nose was bleeding, several teeth were missing and his map was decorated with cuts and bruises. He looked like the wreck of the Hesperus.

"What happened?" asked the cop who was applying first aid.

"I just told a big book where to get off," he whispered, and he said it wasn't his station, but it was mine."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Gentlemen of the Guard.
The original function of the household cavalry was to protect the king's person, and Charles II. saw to it that his life guards were recruited from old cavalier families. Even the privates were men of very good families, and were well paid. Their fine uniforms and finer swagger were an essential part of the splendor of Whitehall. They were called "Gentlemen of the Guard."

Sport Costume.
"Kin I git in this poker game?" inquired Three-Fingered Sam.

"If you'll send East an' git yourself a bathin' suit," answered Cactus Joe, "maybe we'll let you sit in."

"What's the idea of the bathin' suit?"

"It ain't got no pockets nor sleeves to tempt a man to hide out aces."

Another Darned Cynic.
"Why is Johnson looking so down in the mouth?"

"The poor fellow was disappointed in love."

"Of course it never does come up to one's expectations."

That is not asserting one's rights, when it doesn't matter much.

Learn to wait—life's hardest lesson.

Wouldn't Be Wasted.
During a snowstorm early in spring Jack with his shaggy-haired dog, Turk, came upon our porch to shovel off the snow.

Hearing the noise I opened the door to find Turk sitting up, begging for something, so I asked Jack what he wanted.

"He wants bread and butter."

I said, "Do you think he would eat it if I got it for him?"

"Well, if he don't I will," was the answer.—Exchange.

Life Partners
THE union of Nature, Science and the Farmer is a partnership for life.

In the golden sheaves of living wheat, and in the waving, shimmering fields of barley—Nature stores the vital elements of human power and energy which Science converts into Grape-Nuts—the famous body-building food.

Grape-Nuts with milk or cream is a complete food, which contains all the nutrition (including the mineral elements) required for making rich, red blood, and for building sturdy body tissue, sound bone structure and strong, healthy nerve cells.

The 20-hour baking process makes Grape-Nuts easy to digest and develops that delicious, sweet flavor and crispness that has made this food a favorite the world over.

Youthful Fijian Proved Anew That Necessity Is the Fertile Mother of Invention.

A traveler from Fiji in the old days reports that at times in the past when the Fijians were first introduced there the Fijians used to get waves of cricket madness, and in some outlying villages—where it was not so readily quelled by law—a match would be kept up for weeks, on end. Incidentally, they wore their pads strapped on their naked, bootless legs with a very ludicrous effect. But evidently the Fijians have no sense of the ludicrous, for our traveler further reports:

"Another distinguishing mark that rather amused me once upon country was when my house boy, Esau, came in one day with his hair cut away from one side of his head, looking like a somewhat weird 'parting' for the remainder stood up as usual like a bass broom with bristles five inches long. I asked him what on earth he had been doing and he replied: 'Sir, I am now a member of the Lomaloma 'A' team, and we have agreed to cut our hair like this, as the store cannot get 11 shades all the same color.'"—London Tit-Bits.

Gerrald Mitchell and family, who have resided in Grayling for about a year expect to return to Detroit to year have returned to Detroit to live. Mr. Mitchell has been employed as barber in the Walter Cowell barber shop during their residence here. Grant Salisbury and family have moved into the house on Ogema street vacated by them.

A mean trick was played on one of our cottages at Lake Margrethe Monday night when a skunk instead of a rat, as was intended, got into a trap and managed to tear the chain loose and crawled under the cottage, trap and all, and has so completely ordered the place that the occupants had to get out. The cottage was "completely unlivable" it is claimed.

The Sunday school of the Michelson Memorial church, aims to be one that never gives up until a thing is accomplished. They will set the date again for their picnic rally for next Saturday p. m. Sept. 23. The plans have been altered somewhat so that if the weather is chilly we can have the picnic providing the children will come warmly dressed. No one stays indoors this time of the year just because of a cool day, so only rain or snow will stop the picnic. Do NOT bring the basket lunch as was planned before. There will be treats and games at the grounds (Connie's Grove) waiting for you. Hours two to five. And do not forget there is Sunday school at 11:45 on Sunday.

While enroute to Bay City Tuesday Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Gillett had a narrow escape from an auto collision. While coming around a sharp curve this side of Chase bridge they met another car and before they could stop, the running board, fender and radiator of the Gillett car were somewhat damaged. The other car received injuries also. Nobody was to blame except that the cars may have been traveling a little faster than is safe in such places.

Theodore J. Werle, executive secretary of the Michigan Tuberculosis Association gave a very interesting talk at the school auditorium last evening, and it is regretted that there was not a larger crowd present to hear what he had to say. A number of other affairs taking place was no doubt the reason for the smaller crowd at the school building. Mr. Werle's talk was along the lines of the work that has been done and work to be done in stamping out the disease—tuberculosis. One of the purposes of the meeting last night was to organize a county tuberculosis society, but this was set aside and plans made for the Woman's and Goodfellowship clubs in this city to handle the work. The work of the tuberculosis association is financed entirely by the sale of Christmas seals which work Mr. Zalsman has handled successfully for the past several years. Mr. Zalsman took Mr. Werle to the military reservation and with his chery yesterday afternoon. Mr. Werle was very much impressed with Grayling and its surroundings.

RESOLUTION OF RESPECT.

Resolved that, Whereas the great and supreme ruler of the universe has in his infinite wisdom removed from among us one of our worthy and esteemed fellow-members, Joseph C. Burton, and, whereas, the long and intimate relation held with him in the faithful discharge of his duties as a member of the Common Council of the Village of Grayling, makes it eminently befitting that we record our appreciation of him, Therefore Resolved, That the wisdom and ability which he has exercised through his aid by service, contributions and counsel, will be held in grateful remembrance;

Resolved, That the sudden removal of such a life from among us leaves a vacancy and a shadow that will be deeply realized by all the members and friends of this organization, and will prove a serious loss to the community and the public.

Resolved, That the deep sympathy with the bereaved relatives of the deceased we express our hope that even so great a loss to us all may be over ruled for good by him who doeth all things well;

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the records of this municipal body and a copy forwarded to the bereaved family.

Signed:

C. A. Canfield, President.
A. L. Roberts,
Harry E. Simpson,
Eva Reagan,
Frank Sales,
M. A. Atkinson.

The resolution was read, approved and motion carried. Moved and supported we adjourn.

ALL IN THE POINT OF VIEW
Girl: There is nothing beautiful to view in this place.
Smitten Youth: You have the misfortune of not being able to look in the right direction.

IN THE INTEREST OF SCIENCE
Patient—It's pretty rough on me to pay five hundred dollars for an operation that was entirely unnecessary.
Surgeon—But it was necessary. You see, Dr. Carver and I had a little bet on. He said you had an enlarged appendix and I said you hadn't. There was only one way to decide it. I won.

THE BEST WAY.
Bug: Boo, hoo! I can't pay my rent and they put me out.
Snail: You ought to own your own house as I do.
NO SUBSTITUTE OFFERED.
Say what you will about druggists offering something "just as good" because it pays a better profit, the fact still stands that ninety nine out of a hundred druggists recommend Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy when the best medicine for diarrhoea is asked for, and do so because they know from what their customers say of it, that it can be depended upon.

THE IDEAL PURGATIVE.
As a purgative, Chamberlain's Tablets are the exact thing required. Strong enough for the most robust, mild enough for children. They cause an agreeable movement of the bowels without any of that terrible griping. They are easy and pleasant to take and agreeable in effect.

WE believe the best is none too good for the people of Grayling. Our stock consists of the following well known and highly advertised brands — leaders in their class:

Ross Field Officers Develop Photo-Technic to Meet Traffic Needs of Cities.

NOT TAUGHT IN ARMY SCHOOL

Lenses Have Been Discovered Especially Adapted for This Type of Work—Great Aid in Surveying.

Arcadia, Cal.—New fields in engineering studies are being opened at the army balloon and airship school at Ross field here, in the department of plotting from photographic maps, according to officers of the recently reorganized school. The plotting study room is equipped with an enormous square miles of territory, almost to Los Angeles, of which Arcadia is the center. The map is a mosaic of several thousand photographs taken by balloon or airship from an altitude of 500 feet.

Cities to Use Maps.
As a result of these studies by the Langley Field, Virginia, and Arcadia schools, the two great airship centers of the army air service, a number of cities are planning to use aerial photographic maps in connection with city planning, traffic control, street widening and fire protection work, according to army officers.

Other uses to which photographic maps are being put are preliminary investigations of watersheds, hydro-electric developments, highway, railroad and canal location, forest surveys and various engineering works. Army air officers have perfected automatic timing of exposures to cover the proper ground area, and at the same time secure the necessary overlap for the accurate fitting together of individual negatives. This permits taking of pictures from the moving airship or airplane.

Perfect Picture Methods.
Lenses have been discovered especially adapted for this type of work, and the officers have developed the technique covering such details as the best height from which to take pictures for specific purposes, speed of airplane and maintenance of level flights to insure verticality of view. The maps now produced by air service photographers, according to officers, attain a high degree of accuracy and wealth of valuable detail. Aerial photography is among the subjects taught at the Ross Field school. Air service officers point out that among points of particular value to engineering to be found in aerial photography are the speed with which such maps may be produced, ability to cover territory inaccessible on foot, comparatively low cost and impossibility of omitting any feature of the area photographed.

The mosaic map, army officers say, does not mean transit, stadia and plane-table are in the discard, but that engineering surveys made solely by these time-tried instruments will be out of date.

Feed them RAT-NIP —and Not a Rat Can Escape

If there are rats about your premises why not let us send you a tube of the new and remarkably effective discovery, Rat-Nip? The great trouble with rat poisons is to get all rats to eat them. Rat-Nip is just as attractive to rats as Catnip is to cats and they all succumb to it, even the wily, old fellows. One or two Rat-Nip feasts and every rat will positively be exterminated from house, store, barn, stable or garage. Not one will remain.

Rat-Nip is safe, easy and clean to handle. It is put up in neat, collapsible, metal tubes and can be readily squeezed out, without coming in contact with the hands or anything else. One tube goes a long way. Price 30 cents.

Come in and look over our line of goods. We hope to have the pleasure of seeing you soon.

Mind Needs Holiday

Nothing clarifies your mental vision more quickly than withdrawing temporarily from contact with the details of your work. From a distance you lose sight of the small problems of the daily routine and view the structure of your work as a whole. There can be no stronger foundation for success than careful attention to detail, but nevertheless there is a further function—that of fitting the details together in a one complete whole. Concentrate relentlessly on your work, but see to it that your mind has an occasional holiday. It is not rest we need so much as change, and unless you get that once in a while you are not apt to lose your mental poise.—Exchange.

Beetles and Worms as Food.
A rich store of luscious larvae which are sought and eaten by the people of most countries where they are found in abundance is provided by the family of the longicorn beetles. It is considered to have been a member of this family that was fed upon flour and wine by the Romans for the table with all the care that is nowadays bestowed upon a prize pig. One of this tribe is mentioned by Mme. Marlin as being eaten by both the native and white inhabitants of Surinam.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

MARY GRAHAM BONNER

PAIR OF RUBBERS

"It's really a shame," said the first rubber.
"A perfect shame," said the second rubber.
"Of course I don't know what we can do about it," said the first rubber.
"I don't suppose there is anything we can do about it," said the second rubber.
"On a really rainy day it is a different matter," said the first rubber.
"Entirely different," said the second rubber.
"Yes," said the first rubber, "on a really rainy day we are appreciated. But on other days when it looks like rain but doesn't rain, how dreadful it is!"
"I just heard some one say: 'Isn't that just my luck! Here I brought along my rubbers and an umbrella and a raincoat and the sun has come out.'"
"And," said the second rubber, "her companion said: 'Of course that is always the way!' It does seem funny," the second rubber continued, "to hear the same old things again and again. Often when I'm on the street and passing other rubbers I hear their owners say such silly things and they say them as though they were the only ones who had thought up such speeches."
"Now, when some one says that it is just their luck and just because they brought rubbers and an umbrella along that it did not rain they believe that to be the truth.

"And yet you and I know that that has made no difference with the King of the Clouds.
"He hasn't looked down and having seen that lady with her rubbers and umbrella decided then that he would let Mr. Sun take the sky just to annoy her."

"Take the sky?" questioned the first rubber.
"Haven't you heard some one say of another that that person has taken the floor? Meaning, of course, that that person has been the speaker or principal one about at that time."
"Well, I can't speak of Mr. Sun as having taken the floor so I speak of him as having taken the sky," the second rubber explained.
"But it does seem so absurd to me to hear people talk. I've been in shops and some one will say:
"Just because I particularly want that color ribbon of course they are all out of it."
"And then I've been in a taxi-cab and my owner has said:
"There! I was waiting until I got drenched for a taxi and now come along and now that I'm in one I see my number pass by."

"Oh, how such speeches do amuse me. Well, it is a good thing we can find some amusement when we are only a pair of rubbers."
"Yes," said the first rubber, "I've heard such speeches, just as you have, and they, too, have amused me. Just as though our owner or any other person were singled out in such a way!"
"But it is too bad we're not more popular. Dear me, dear me, how many of us have heard it said:
"Oh, Mama, why do I have to put on rubbers? They're so hot and horrid! Please don't tell me I have to put on rubbers. The ground isn't really wet."

"And then, too, grown-ups don't flatter us any more than they ever did."
"Yet when it pours people are thankful enough for their rubbers and that we will keep them from catching cold."
"But even though we do so much good and help people so much still we are not popular and I doubt if we ever will be."

"I doubt it too," said the second rubber.
And then the rubbers croaked a little song they had made up. It was called:
"The Pair of Rubbers and Their Song."
"This was the way it went:
"We're only a pair of rubbers
And nobody cares much for us
When we have to be worn
On uncertain days, oh goodness,
There is such a fuss
We're not things of beauty,
We're not things of brains,
But to keep people from Catching cold we really
Do take pains
And so we should get some praise!"

HAPPY YOUNG COUPLE

Congratulations are showering in on Mr. and Mrs. John Harriman on their marriage, which took place in Port Chester, N. Y., a few weeks ago. The wedding was a secret one, although it took place with the consent of both families. The couple are now living at the home of Howard Chandler Christy, who has acted as guardian for the bride. John Harriman is the sixteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Harriman of New York, and his bride was Miss Alice A. Laidley of Chicago, the same age as the groom. The couple met at the home of the famous artist, where the bride was staying while studying music.

"Bill" Burgess Now a British Lord

William Burgess of Milwaukee recently received the news that he had fallen heir to the titles and estates of his father, known as Lord Roberts. Known to his intimates in Milwaukee newspaper circles as plain "Bill," Burgess has made elaborate plans for entering upon his domains as a British peer. He was engaged in newspaper work for several years, and while in Montreal he frequently came into contact with visiting members of the nobility. Seventeen years ago Burgess chanced to meet the then prince of Wales, now King George. It was while the prince of Wales was making a tour of Canada, and Burgess, together with other newspaper correspondents, occupied a car of the royal train. So when Bill Burgess is presented at the Court of St. James as Lord Roberts he will not be entirely a stranger to the king. In later years Burgess left the newspaper field and engaged in the artificial flower business and the photograph shows him at work in his shop.
